McLaren's Antiques & Interiors is Round Top's best kept secret – it is a great environment, fun and with loads of choice.

In McLaren's it is full of unique finds hand-picked by Sean from all around the world where he seeks out antiques and architectural finds.

From England, we hand-craft in our workshop reclaimed pine tables and kitchen islands, we find antique amoires and double buffets from French Chateaux and visit the palaces of India to discover amazing doors. This is just a taste of where Sean travels to discover the most unique items – there really is something for everyone.

It is also an idea generating place to shop as we create vignettes to show room settings to give ideas of how best to mix antique and industrial furniture and accessories.

Finally, all items are bought direct from source so we have the best prices around.

The Compound

The Compound Antique Show

What you will find

The show is housed in four uniquely-styled barns featuring soaring ceilings and surrounded by landscaped grounds, trickling fountains, courtyards, and encompassing over 30,000+ square feet. Visitors experience a level of high quality shopping that sets a new standard for the area. The emphasis of show producer, Kathy Johnston at owner/developer Mark Massey's property on Highway 237 (2 miles south of Round Top's Square) is the delivery of a broad mix of true antiques interspersed with vintage and repurposed items. Entrance into the show is juried to keep the mix high in quality, vibrant, and to control any overabundance in any given category. "For example," says Johnston "it's doubtful we'll ever have more than one antique rug dealer in the show. We have one of the finest in Nomads Loom of Dallas, for example, as well as in other genres, so there's really no need." Likewise, there is only one silver dealer, one fine estate jeweler, one antique weaponry dealer, and so on. The feeling when one tours the show is that there is something different throughout each of the barns and around every corner. I think that level of anticipation and excitement is critical to an exceptional show experience for our shoppers," says Johnston.

What you will find at The Compound includes fine American and European antiques (French, German, English), American country antiques, fine mid-century modern (European and American '50s-era); exceptional, museum quality antique weaponry, as well as Russian icons; fine estate jewelry and vintage designer jewelry such as Chanel and other European designers; American Native and antique lodge furniture, architectural items, fine antique artwork, excellent advertising art and artifacts, ancient shipwreck treasure for collecting or repurposed as stunning jewelry; fine antique rugs, sterling silver (flatware and serving pieces); repurposed furniture and furnishings, linens, both quirky and fine, finely designed and crafted furniture and furnishings using found materials; lighting - both newly created and antique, and much more.

Food choices are numerous in The Grove at the Compound. Purveyed in a patio setting with big umbrellas shading large picnic tables, virtually every palate can be satisfied and wine and beer are available. Show hours are 9:30 to 6:00 daily. Entrance is complimentary, as is ample parking.
